At the end of WWII, the year the first atomic bomb was dropped, the Gnostic Gospels were unearthed in the Egyptian desert. These scrolls are not only revising our Judeo-Christian history, they are slowly transforming our entire spiritual perspective. The recovered texts portray the origins of Judaism and Christianity as the Western branches of a radically feminine oriented Universal spiritual tradition that links our religious history to the mystical core of every major faith in the world. Peter Canova's talk examines how the writings of the ancient mystics foreshadowed quantum physics and Einstein's theory of relativity in describing the creation of the universe, the origins of humanity, and the nature of our reality.

Peter Canova

For the past thirty years, Peter Canova has researched mainstream and alternative religious/spiritual studies, along with quantum physics. He is considered one of America's foremost authorities on the secret teachings of the Gnostic gospels, the Sacred Feminine, and ancient spiritual traditions. He is the author of the acclaimed spiritual thriller, Pope Annalisa, the winner of an unprecedented seven national book awards in less than a year since its publication
